Texarkana Votes Bonds But Hope Has Municipal Plant

Voters of Texarkana, Texas, Tuesday approved a $182,000 bond issue for municipal improvements required since the great influx of people to the border city for construction of the War Department's Lone Star shell-loading plant. Similar expansion of public facilities faces Hope, and for a similar reason—construction of the Southwestern Proving Ground—but it is unlikely that we shall ever have to float a bond issue to accomplish our purpose.

For Hope has a municipal water & light plant that consistently supports the major portion of the cost of local government, eliminates such local nuisance levies as the "occupation tax" and street tax, and yet allows a certain amount for expansion of the city's capital investment each year.

For the benefit of newcomers it should be recalled that Hope's city hall was erected without any bond issue, the city simply issuing warrants and using the profits of the water & light plant to pay them off over a few years.

Many needs confront Hope today—a town of perhaps 10,000 permanent inhabitants, but with a sewerage system originally designed to serve 3,000; many more miles of paved streets, and so forth.

With such federal aid as may be reasonably expected it is entirely likely the city government can take care of all its requirements without ever being compelled to suggest a bonded debt.

And for this we have to thank the founders of this city who not very long after Hope's incorporation in 1875 established the municipal electric plant and built it up as local government's greatest single asset.

By WILLIS THORNTON
Sauce for the Gander

There is nothing funny about the bombing of cities.

The dropping of death from the skies on innocent women and children who have offended nobody is a grim and barbarous business.

If it were possible to squeeze a single drop of tortured humor out of so bloody a business, it would come from the German complaints that the bombing of Berlin is a "lout trick," "cruel," "low-down and contemptible." It is enough to make the gods laugh—or cry.

These bombings took place almost exactly a year after the German all-out attacks on England began. For nearly a year, Britain has grunted her teeth and taken it as London flared into weird bonfires, Coventry seethed to ashes, and many another ancient home and building became a raging crypt for the innocent. All men could do was to shake futile fists at the dark skies in sheer heart-breaking impotence. That, and grimly await their turn.

That turn seems to have come. With long-range bombers at last at the disposal of the British, Berlin and other German cities are feeling a tithe of the wrath they unleashed on the cities of Britain.

Again innocent ones are dying, unoffending women and babies are dying in Germany now, as they have died all this long year in Britain. The homeless range the streets, distracted and dazed. It is horrible now, as it was horrible then.

Once again, no pilot, German or British, knows what his bomb is going to hit as he pulls the bomb release 20,000 feet above a sleeping city. The variation of a fraction of a hair's breadth in the adjustment means a variation of hundreds of yards in the fall of the bomb; the difference between hitting the military storehouse on one street and the hospital in the next block. The pilot hasn't been born who wouldn't rather hit the storehouse if he had any choice.

There was boasting enough when London was quivering under the repeated blows. The British cities were going to be wiped off the map, one by one, until the British cried for mercy. Now when, after a year of that, some tenth of the terror is returned to Berlin, there is a cry of "Barbarism!"

Barbarism it is, indeed. The world cannot call itself civilized until it has ceased to be. But the world suddenly becomes hard of hearing when Frankenstein cries out against his own Monster.

Washington — (AP)—The senate Wednesday sent to President Roosevelt the $3,534,000 tax bill. Approval came by voice vote. The legislation will affect virtually every citizen and corporation in the country, and become effective on incomes for the current calendar year.

Influenza was first recorded in Greece in 412 B. C. Since that time, its toll has mounted into millions.

War struck for the third time in another continent when Iran followed Iraq and Syria as an Asiatic battleground where the Germans were getting the jump on the Germans. Here's your chance to take a pinpoint tour of this fabled land.

Strikers Cut off Current in Kansas City Six Arrested Following 4-Hour Blackout Tuesday Night

KANSAS CITY — (AP)—Swift official action Wednesday, checked an unheated power strike which blacked out this city of 400,000 for four hours plunging hospital rooms into darkness and stalling street cars for hours. The police seized 6 men involved in what Mayor Gage called an "out-law strike" against the Kansas City Power and Light Company. A battalion of the recently organized Missouri Home Guard was mobilized by the state governor and another was called on to be ready to go into action.

Albert Wright, representative of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, (AFL) was arrested at a power plant by order of chief of police Anderson. He was released on bond after a few hours.

Anderson said charges of sabotage or malicious mischief would be filed against the other five men arrested.

A police detail headed by Mayor Gage and Anderson ejected some 25 strikers from the Northeast power station. Current poured back through the lines as non-striking workers went back to their jobs.

A. E. Betis, Vice president of the power company said there was enough men on duty to operate the plants if they were not interfered with.

The strike grew out of a jurisdictional dispute between the AFL union and independent union workers and the company.

The master switches of the Kansas City Power and Light Co., were thrown at the stroke of midnight to launch the strike with breaking back swiftness.

Threatened with complete shutdown was the city's large industries many of whom are given to defense work. After four hours of darkness non-striking workers started two turbines at the company's main plant. These furnished power to the hospitals.

Officials announced early restoration of a limited supply of current as setting only one pumping station at the auxiliary power plant would have been unable to supply the full city pull for more than a few hours.

Not Brought Here
Although the need for expanded hospital facilities in Hope is admittedly great there is apparently no record of an injured man having been refused hospitalization here last Monday.

The case cited by the Arkansas Democrat Tuesday was that of Frank Gathright, 45, WPA bridge foreman, who died last Monday in a Texarkana hospital after his truck got loose on a hill in Howard county.

Julia Chester hospital told The Star that Gathright wasn't brought there, and Josephine hospital, the only other one in Hope, is closed for the time being in the absence of Dr. G. E. Cannon, who is taking a special study course at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.

Nor was there any record of the Gathright case at the Herndon-Cornelius Funeral Home, which provides emergency ambulance service in accident cases.

33rd Division Praises Hope
"Illinois Guardsman" Issue Features This City

The hospitality of Hope during the August maneuvers of the Second Army is featured in the September 10th issue of the Illinois Guardsman, paper published twice a month for members of the 33rd Division.

A copy of the newspaper was sent to Mrs. B. C. Hyslop of this city by Private Joseph Dunn, one of the soldiers she entertained in her home.

In a long front-page box the Illinois Guardsman said:

"The consensus of the soldiers who have visited Hope is that Southern hospitality is being demonstrated to the highest degree here. Their appreciation is evidenced by the many return trips to this cheerful Southern city."

An inside page of the Guardsman carries a picture of the sign over Highway 67: "Soldiers Welcome to Hope, Ark.—Hot Springs May Battle the World But We Bath the Army."

And on the back page of the paper is a news story from Hope describing the free showers for soldiers in Fair park and praising the work of the Civilian Military Council which made the showers possible.

The Guardsman also carries pictures and stories from Prescott and Rosston—the feature picture on the front page shows 33rd Division troops lining up for mess near Rosston.

Rose-Colored Glasses Give Britons False Views of the United States

By PAUL MANNING
NEA Service London on Correspondent

A wishful-thinking England is in the habit of looking across the seas at America through rose-colored binoculars. From English newspapers, radio broadcasts and public speakers, Britons receive the impression that America already is virtually in the war at their side.

Touring the United States on a vacation trip this summer after a year and a half spent in wartime England, I could not help but be struck by the fact that, if an average Englishman were with me, he would be unhappily jarred out of a lot of his false impressions about us. For instance:

Englishmen Believe: They'd Be Surprised to Discover:

American popular sentiment still is miles from war (though nearly everyone I talked to believes that a continuation of the administration's current foreign policy will inevitably lead to war.)

There is a great apathy in regard to the war and the ordinary American devotes most of his conversation to business, baseball, fashions and the weather.

Although production has improved greatly in tanks and airplanes and guns, factory managers still preface every conversation with "come 1942 and 1943."

Opposition to Roosevelt and his foreign policy is to be found among both Capital and Labor groups who are neither isolationists nor supporters of Lindbergh and Wheeler.

Still undertrained and inadequately equipped is the U. S. Army today, despite the great strides it has made.

Because interventionist editorials are quoted in England to the exclusion of nearly every other sort, it would be a distinct shock to most Britishers to read various isolationist American newspapers.

Large groups of native-born Americans are still suspicious of England and her motives because they still remember the false stories and the ill-feeling between both nations which followed 1918.

An African first night is an unreal and flat experience. Nothing excites because the grip of war is still too firm. It all seems like mockery, fun-making in the American fashion, until gradually one learns to relax.

It will be two years or more before ships in the quantities now desired by Britain are moving down American shipways.

A common passport and citizenship would not be accepted by the rank and file of Americans anymore than it would by the ordinary Englishman.

Only in Washington, D. C., was there anything resembling the dynamic, but unfortunately this was mixed with a large slice of confusion. In Los Angeles, Cleveland, Philadelphia, New York, the cities I visited recently, the tempo outside actual defense factories was low.

Half of Army Cards Still Out Must Be Returned to Land Board Even if No Loss

Farmers who have not yet returned their Army land-permit cards to the local Army Land Board office in the Hempstead county courthouse should do so at once. If they sustained damage during the August maneuvers they should estimate the amount of the loss on the card—but even if they sustained no loss the card still must be returned, with the statement that there was no loss.

This was pointed out Wednesday by First Lieut. W. H. Dillenbeck, who has succeeded Major Forrest C. Ritters at the Army Land Board office.

Lieut. Dillenbeck estimates Wednesday that of the 3,700 cards issued to Hempstead county farmers about 50 per cent are still outstanding. All of these must be returned, stating either damage or no damage, he said.

31 Men Killed in Mysterious Ship Explosions Casualties Feared High as Three New Destroyers Sink

STOCKHOLM — (AP)—Three Swedish destroyers blew up and sank Wednesday while at anchor in an east coast Swedish port and first reports said 31 men were killed.

Casualties were feared to be high but full extent of the disaster was not known because of flaming oil which hampered desperate rescuers.

(An unidentified transport was reported in a DNB broadcast last Wednesday also to have been lost "despite heroic efforts.") The German news agency said the 1,500-ton Swedish mine layer Klas Fleming was heavily damaged when mines aboard her exploded.

The destroyer Goteborg on which the first blast occurred split the vessel into and sank it instantly.

So fierce were the explosion, the broadcast said, that soldiers on nearby Maergarna had to take refuge in air raid shelters.

Dispatches from Stockholm said the boiler aboard the ship caused the disaster. This would indicate that ammunition may have been set off and hit on other ships.)

It was established that one officer and 6 non-commissioned officers and 24 marines were killed besides 11 others injured.

Swedish authorities said they could not account for the blast which apparently started on one ship and sank all three one after another.

The explosion occurred in the Harfsjaerden harbor, a fjord of the Baltic coast south of Stockholm used by Sweden's expanding navy as a proving ground.

New Destroyers
All three destroyers were comparatively new and of Swedish build. The first, a 1,044-ton ship was completed in 1936 and was said to have blown up and sunk first. The others were the Klas Horn and the Kals Uggla, each 1,020 tons.

The Klas Horn sank quickly and the other went down later. Details of a series of blasts were still obscure, however, as every available coastal boat put out to the rescue. Every ambulance in Stockholm was rushed to the scene.

Russia Reports New Successes
Claim More Than 10,000 Nazis Killed Near Smolensk

By the Associated Press
Russian armies reported Wednesday a smashing counter offensive on the central front 30 miles northeast of Smolensk in which the Germans were hurled back westward with 10,000 killed and wounded after an eight day battle.

The Red army newspaper, Red Star, said fighting raged around Yartsevo on the main highway between Smolensk and Moscow. Other dispatches said Russians were still pressing the attack and were now in a position to invest Smolensk.

Soviet reports also declared that Red army troops defending the Leningrad had recaptured a vital strategic crossroad village thus wrecking Germans plans for a new thrust against Leningrad itself.

Lying 230 miles west of Moscow, Smolensk was captured by the Germans more than 6 weeks ago in the first drive toward the Russian capital.

While the Russians claimed staggering defeat for the Germans Adolf Hitler's high command said the Nazi offensive was "developing into operations of the greatest extent."

Beyond this general statement the high command gave no details but military dispatches said the German columns were slashing eastward across the steppe of the Dnieper river threatening Donets industrial section.

Advices reaching London said Hitler's forces, balked for the moment by Leningrad's stone wall defense, were striking toward the town of Bollogoe, midway along the 400 mile rail line between Moscow and Leningrad.

If successful, the reports said, the Germans would seriously hamper the movement of supplies to the Red armies along the entire northern front.

German dispatches said Russian troops swooping down from the Wal-

BRIDE FROM THE SKY

By HELEN WELSHIMER

THE STORY: Associate magazine editor Judy Allen is confused and bewildered by many things—the delays of her secretary, Sara Fuller, who put her own name on a story of Judy's; her love for Sandy Amerson, aviator, whom Judy decided to join when his plane was downed on the west coast, only to change her plans when newspaper stories link him romantically with actress Jean Harlow. Judy's friend, Philip Rogers is another aviator to whom Judy turns for comfort, deciding to put Sandy out of her mind.

CALL FROM SAN FRANCISCO

CHAPTER IX

SARA FULLER and Philip Rogers had entered the drug store restaurant and sat down in a booth near Judy's. She took a tip from her pocketbook, left it by her glass, and spoke to the two latecomers.

"Hi, you two. Since when have you taken to the 35-cent lunch-ette? Last I heard of you, Phil, you liked the Coq Rouge and the Rainbow Grill. They do have good sandwiches. I've tasted them."

Phil arose and motioned to a seat. "Sit down and join us. It's all impromptu. I had to come up-town, and Sara was the only one at the office left to take pity on me. She said she wouldn't go anywhere but here."

Judy shook her head. "I've mountains of work making a border around my desk. Can't wait a minute. Just don't form the drug store habit, Phil. Sara and I are addicts, but men hate it. It doesn't fill you up."

Sara smiled brightly under the up-lift brim of the hat which matched the honey stripes in her frock.

"Yesterday it was the Coq Rouge, Judy. But he came too late today. Why shouldn't we start a department on manners for men in our magazine?" Her voice was too smooth, her eyes too superior, too satisfied.

"We'll talk about it later," Judy answered. "I have to fly."

For a moment, hurrying across the street, she felt a pin point of anger at Philip. Why had he flouted Sara at her today? True, Sara owed her job to an aunt who had supplied most of the capital for the magazine. The aunt was a board member. Maybe the board members would approve of Sara's story thievery—that was what it was. Maybe she, Judy Allen, Vassar '37, could be asked to pack her books and cosmetics and start to drop around at agencies.

It was odd to be disappointed in two men in one day. Maybe people were right who bowed themselves to nothing, although they walked a lonely way, a fearful way. Hearts weren't pin cushions. But the moment's interest in Phil died. It was of no consequence.

THERE was a call waiting for her at the office. "From the Municipal Airport in San Francisco," the receptionist said. "I'll get the operator immediately."

Judy's knees became limp and her hands trembled as she closed and locked the door into her office. Shakingly she tossed her hat onto her desk and picked up the telephone. Across mountains, through gorges and streams, Sandy was calling her. One could believe in rainbows and dreams, in faith that did not fail.

"Ready with San Francisco," an operator's voice asked quietly. "Is Miss Judy Allen there?"

"Yes, oh, yes," Judy croaked. "I'm waiting."

"Go ahead, please," the operator concluded her part in the coast conversation.

"Judy?" Ah, there was no voice so low, so heart-stirring; no voice that repented a name and opened the gates to heaven so instantly.

"Sandy darling! Did you finish your trip?" she asked, all hurt forgotten for a brief, bright moment.

"Without another mishap, Judy sweet! The oil's grand. But I can't see you for a few more days. I'm delayed." Three thousand miles his voice hesitated, spoke too carefully.

"Yes, Sandy?" Some of the glory was going, draining away, unseen and unheard.

"I have to fly back to the Gordon lodge and pick up my plane as soon as it is ready. It will take three days at least."

Judy hated women who asked curious questions. She believed in freedom of movement, freedom of heart and soul and mind. Yet she heard her voice asking Sandy how he had reached his destination. Not her voice. A quiet, unmoved voice. A voice that sounded un-caring because it cared so much.

"Feg let me refuel with the new oil and come on as I had planned. She's all right, Judy. You'll like her."

"Am I going to meet her, Sandy?"

"Certainly, you are. What is this, honey? A quiz on my late adventure?"

"Silly nut, of course not. And why shouldn't you have an adventure? You're not bound by any reasons."

"Except that I love you and nobody else will do."

"Are you sure?"

"Hey, nitwit, I'd try to impress you, but it comes high at $5 a word."

"I'm impressed—and the answer to your usual question is in the affirmative!" So he still loved her. It wasn't too late. Men couldn't turn off their emotions like twisting a spigot any more than women could.

"And you wait until I'm three thousand miles away to tell me I'm back on something more than wings. But, Judy—" Now she knew that his voice was uncertain and worried.

"All right, Sandy. Say it."

"Feg's here with me. Insisted on coming on after her ankle was fixed. She's getting a thrill out of the notoriety and making up a romance that doesn't exist. She's a romance to me and—well, I can't let her down right now. Next week when I'm home I'll tell the world about us." His tones were definitely worried. "Please understand, Judy."

"Why can't you let her down, Sandy?"

"Because she's a real person, and she's said a few things, thinking I was free. You and I will show her, Judy. We'll never let on we understood what she meant. And everything you hear is nonsense. Please believe me."

THREE THOUSAND miles was such a far away distance. Three thousand miles was the distance between now and never.

"But I'll be the one to be pitied!" She had never thought she would plead with a shining-haired young aviator across a continent.

"But why, Judy?" His voice was perplexed. "You've always told me to fly away before. No one knows."

It was so masculine for a man not to understand—so dumb and yet so dear, for Sandy to take her at the words she hadn't meant.

"Feg's flying back with me so she can see her own doctor about her ankle. It would be an awkward trip with the kid in sniffling."

"I know. Men hate women who cry. And it will be lovely in your silver plane in the sky. She may even forget her ankle. Goodbye, Sandy."

She knew that he tried to call her—to promise something—but she hung up swiftly. Her face was white, her mouth a Valentine red when she met Phil at 5. He looked solid, sturdy, devoted. The kind of a man every girl should marry.

When Phil's hand covered hers across the table, she withdrew it quickly. He had something to ask her, though. Wearily, politely she raised her eyes to listen.

biles without purchasing Arkansas tags as they agreed when making application for said permit. Arkansas statutes provides for no extension of such temporary permits and motorists operating their cars under them must buy Arkansas licenses for their cars after the expiration of their permits, officials said.

Officers indicated Tuesday that the current drive will continue until all automobiles operating in this area are properly licensed as provided by law.

Motorists owning cars bearing out-of-state tags and operating them in Hope and Hempstead county may call at the local revenue office in the court house building and buy licenses for their automobiles and trucks; otherwise they will be stopped on the streets and highways and the vehicles stored until they are properly registered, officials said.

Comiskey Is in Condition

Will Arrive in Little Rock to Fight Bob Sikes

NORTH LITTLE ROCK — Uncle Sam has taken a hand in determining whether Pat Comiskey is in the proper physical condition to take on Bob Sikes, the Southern Heavyweight Champion, in their scheduled 10-round fight in the Rodeo Arena here Monday night.

Comiskey was scheduled to arrive in Little Rock Tuesday to complete his training, but Manager Bill Daly telephoned that Comiskey had been delayed by his draft board in Jersey City. Pat, the towering Irishman who holds two victories over Sikes, has just turned 21 and Uncle Sam has his number up.

Comiskey will take his physical examination in Jersey City Wednesday and will board an American Airlines plane for Little Rock immediately following his physical test. He will arrive at 2:15 a. m. Wednesday and will make his first appearance in the Eagles' gymnasium in Little Rock Thursday afternoon.

If Pat comes through his examination for Uncle Sam that will prove that he is in good shape for his third encounter with Sikes. Manager Daly said that Pat had been in training the past month and would be in

Revenue Drive Here Tuesday

Out-of-State SPG Workers Required to Buy Auto Tags

State revenue and police officials making a careful check of all automobiles being operated in Hope and Hempstead county Tuesday stopped several hundred drivers of cars bearing out-of-state tags and required them to purchase Arkansas licenses.

Most of the motorists apprehended were employees of the Southwest Frying Company whose homes were in other states but who are now living in this area where they are gainfully employed.

Many out-of-state cars have been operated in Hope and Hempstead county during the past two months on "temporary employment permits."

Most of these permits have expired and the owners, in many instances, have continued to drive the automobiles.

the "pink" for Mr. Sikes. Despite losses to Max Baer and Lou Nova, Comiskey still has his eyes on the heavyweight championship, but Uncle Sam may be the promoter instead of Mike Jacobs.

Jim Robinson of Philadelphia, who will meet Bill Peterson of Chicago in the second 10-round feature, arrived Wednesday and went through a sparring session with Sikes. He impressed a large crowd with his punching power. Peterson is expected to arrive late Wednesday or Wednesday night.

In the meantime, fans continued to "fight" for choice seats, indicating that the largest crowd in Arkansas ring history would jam the Rodeo Arena for the "All-Star" card.

Promoter Levy said that ringside seats were going fast but there are many choice spots available. They are on sale at Rube and Scott's Men Store, 417 Main Street. Out of town orders should be accompanied by a money order or cashier's check. Prices are $3.50 for ringside, $2.20 for reserved, and $1.10 for general admission.

Crackers Whip Vols 2 to 1

Southern Playoff Series Is Evened Up Two All

NASHVILLE, Tenn. —(AP)—Bob Chipman pitched the Crackers to a 2-to-1 decision over the Nashville Vols in the first game of the Southern playoff series at two games all.

In a pitchers' duel with Roxie Lawson and Charlie Gassaway, the Crackers left-handed allowed only seven hits and made the most of a home run by Lester Burge in the fourth inning and singles by Connie Ryan and John Gerlach in the seventh.

It was his third straight play-off triumph, and his second over the Vols.

Although he couldn't stop Fleming completely, Chipman shortened the range of the Nashville slugger, whose four home runs contributed largely to Nashville's two wins. Fleming got two singles and walked twice, making 10 straight times he has been on base.

Burge, just out of a hospital where was treated for an attack of appendicitis, hit the ball out of the park after two were out in the fourth. Nashville tied the score in the same inning on a single by Fleming, a fielder's choice another single by Charlie English and a force-out.

Ryan opened the seventh with a single to left, took second on Richards' tap to the mound and scored the winning run when Gerlach hit over second.

Fifth Game Wednesday Night

George Jeffcoat will pitch the fifth game of the series for Nashville Wednesday night with Ed Heusser the probable Atlanta choice.

Library Class Held Tuesday

Various Librarians of County Make Reports

The Hempstead County Library Training Class was held Tuesday at the city hall with Miss Elsie Weisenberger, Hempstead county librarian as instructor.

The class opened at 10 o'clock with all library workers answering the roll call except one. Reports were made by the various librarians for the summer months.

Many new borrowers have been added to the roll an interest in reading better books is growing throughout the country. This is partially due to the influx of population since the beginning of the construction of the Southwestern Proving Ground.

An outline for book selection evaluation was discussed in detail by Miss Weisenberger. Plans for the next eight months were outlined.

The chronological steps in organizing a library were studied. A round table discussion was held and the library clerks selected new books for the libraries.

Mrs. Johnnie McCabe reviewed "The Keys of the Kingdom," by Cronin. The meeting adjourned at 3:30 until the third Tuesday in October.

FDR Was Still Boy to Mother

Three Time President Had Remarkable Mother

WASHINGTON — When the news of the death of Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt reached Washington the remark most often heard was that she was the most remarkable mother any President ever had.

Although never in the foreground except at a benefit for some charity, such as the Warm Springs Foundation, Mrs. Roosevelt senior was a legend in Washington. From an intimate of the family, here are three stories which illustrate traits which made her remarkable:

Her resistance to weather and her indomitable will were two characteristics which many believe she passed on to her son and which made it possible for him to rise above illness to now nearly nine strenuous years of almost perfect health in the White House.

On a bitterly cold morning in January 1931 Mr. Roosevelt was preparing to leave the Governor's mansion in Albany for New York City. The entourage was already in cars when Mrs. Roosevelt senior entered a front room.

"Where's Franklin?" she demanded. "I must talk to him."

A friend explained that he already was in his car. Mrs. Roosevelt hurried to the window, thumped the pane, signalled for the cars to wait and rushed out into the freezing weather without hat or coat. In a few moments Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt entered the room, saw her mother-in-law standing in the cold and hurried to get her coat. The friend offered to take it out. Mrs. Roosevelt explained "She would never put it on for you."

She hurried out with it, but the 76-year-old matriarch impatiently
